Campus Aide Charged With Child Porn

By Bobby Calvan

KENSINGTON -- A bail hearing is scheduled today for Steven Monroe Kabeary, an Albany High School campus aide and former Berkeley Boy Scout troop leader who was arrested last week on charges related to child pornography and child molestation.

Kabeary, 35, was arraigned Oct. 20 on four felony charges in connection with lewd acts involving juveniles under 14-years-old and exploiting minors for pornographic material. Two misdeamonor charges were also filed against the former Kensington man for "annoying or molesting" minors.

Kabeary pled not guilty to all charges at his arraignment. A preliminary hearing is set for Nov. 3, according to the court calendar.

Kabeary was being held at the county jail in Martinez pending today's bail review hearing, where Kabeary's attorney is expected to ask the court to reduce bail for his client. Kabeary was unable to post the $500,000 bail set for release.

The DA's office had asked the court to deny bail to Kabeary because of threats allegedly made against a number of teenagers that police say he victimized, according to Lt. Leanord St. Onge who led the police investigation.

The victims ranged in age from 12 to 15, according to St. Onge, and most were from the Albany, Berkeley and Kensington areas. St. Onge said most of the victims were either Albany High students or members of Kabeary's former Boy Scout troop.

At least six of the juveniles have agreed to testify against Kabeary, according to St. Onge.

Kabeary was removed from his Boy Scout post when accusations of improprieties surfaced, according to Scout Executive Quentin Alexander.

Kabeary was placed on administrative leave by the Albany Unified School District on Sept. 21, pending resolution of the case. Kabeary is employed as a campus aide, which involves monitoring students during recesses and lunch hours, as well as student disciplinary matters.

Kensington police began their investigation when a minor told an officer he was sexually exploited by Kabeary, according to

Apartments to Replace Worn Businesses

By Will Tizard

EL CERRITO -- Plans for a large apartment complex on the 11700 block of San Pablo Avenue, unanimously approved Monday night, have local business owners worried and frustrated. But the complex is essential to the city's economy, say officials.

The apartments could provide a much-needed boost to El Cerrito's economy, said Pat O'Keeffe, Redevelopment Agency director. No formal agreements have been made with developers but a plan for seeking offers over the next 45 days to construct an apartment complex with up to 113 units on the block near the city's northern edge got strong agency support at Monday's meeting.

Only one developer has indicated strong interest in the project, Riley Bower, which is already leasing most of the 162 units at the company's Civic Center Apartments, opposite City Hall. Riley Bower set the agency's plan in motion when it contacted the city in August regarding the feasibility of more apartments.

The agency will not choose a developer until it allows 45 days for other developers to submit bids, said O'Keeffe. He will then recommend one developer to the

RUSD Plans Partnership With Computer Giants

By Jonathan D. Rabinovitz

EL CERRITO -- Ten Fortune 500 computer companies are competing for the opportunity to be in a partnership with the Richmond Unified School District to develop a comprehensive educational computer system.

At the Oct. 19 RUSD school board meeting, administrators said that they wanted a company that will commit both money and research to establish a district-wide computer system. In return, the company will be able to use the district schools as a laboratory to develop a computer system that could be sold to school districts throughout the country.

"We are looking for vendors who want to develop a state-of-the-art system," school superintendent Walter Marks told boardmembers.

After sending letters to about 40 companies, the district is now being actively "pursued" by ten companies — including IBM, Apple, and Wang — even though the program may involve a substantial investment, said Marks. The ten companies are supposed to submit conceptual proposals by November 15.

School officials are calling on the companies to work with the RUSD to develop a computer system that will be used in the central district office and each of the district's 56 schools for both instruction and administration. Administrators expect that the package will take seven years to develop and will include both hardware and software. The computer company is expected to oversee the implementation of the system and to provide in-service staff training.

In his second year as superintendent, Marks is pushing the district along on his program to become "the school district of the future." He has said repeatedly that he wants computers involved in all aspects of school district operations — from children learning reading lessons to school staff tabulating daily attendance records.

According to a report issued at last week's board meeting, by 1995 computers will be as pervasive as "chalkboards in the classroom" and "typewriters in the office."

The report states that every RUSD classroom will have at least one computer terminal, and every school will have one or more micro-computer laboratories. According to the report, the district will need to purchase about 720 micro-computers, nearly doubling the number currently in the schools.

The report states, "All teachers will be computer literate and will be fully trained in how to use a computer to teach."

The computer system is also intended to cover administrative tasks, such as personnel files and scheduling. Although some administrative functions are currently done by computers at individual schools, the new system will try to coordinate them and link them to a centralized system.

There is no existing computer system that includes such a range of activities, and for this reason the RUSD has sought to attract high-tech help by offering itself as a guinea pig.

"The Richmond school system is one of the first to try to put these different aspects together," said Laura Nelson, a senior

Givens Named Acting Manager

By Christina Smith

EL CERRITO--Dan Givens will remain interim city manager until a replacement can be appointed sometime after Jan. 1, the City Council annouced Monday.

The council was scheduled to hear presentations by two executive search firms last night, Ralph Anderson Associates and Shannon Associates, both from Sacramento. The representative for Shannon Associates was unable to attend the meeting and his presentation was rescheduled for Wednesday.

Bob Murray, a vice president for Ralph Anderson Associates, emphasized the prior service the firm has rendered for the city of El Cerrito, having located the previous city manager, Ron Creagh, in 1981. Anderson Associates has also placed city managers in Walnut Creek, Fairfield, and Concord and is currently seeking city managers for Vallejo and Piedmont.

The proposal submitted to the council last night provided for meetings with councilmembers to identify the issues specific to El Cerrito. The firm would then put together a profile of the ideal candidate and review it with the

Slaughter Case Records Show Weapons Cache

By Will Tizard

ALBANY -- The cardiologist accused of shooting one lamb to death and wounding three others so badly that they had to be put to death, has 25 guns registered to him, according to court documents.

Martin Schmukler, a doctor with a practice at 600 San Pablo Ave. in Albany, earlier denied owning any handguns to The Journal and to a detective, according to police reports.

Five of the guns registered to Schmukler are .45s and two of those are automatics. All but seven of the guns are shown as new. The list, which appeared to consist of handguns only, also includes three .357 revolvers.

The lambs were shot with a .45 automatic pistol, just before Schmukler was seen leaving their enclosure, say police reports, although no witnesses have said they saw Schmukler shoot the animals.

The five-page Deparment of Justice printout obtained by The Journal was provided to detectives investigaing Schmukler after the June 30 shooting next door to his El Sobrante home.

At a hearing Tuesday, a decision on five pre-trial motions from Schmukler's attorney was put off until they can be reviewed further.

Schmukler was charged Aug. 29 with four misdemeanor counts of cruelty to animals. He did not return telephone calls, nor would his attorney, Randolph Daar, comment on the case.

In a search of Schmukler's home following the shooting, Contra Costa County detectives found no guns, but did find several unspent .45 automatic ammunition rounds, a pistol grip and a gun case. Mailings from the Westwind .45 shooting club were

Trauma Tax Would Beef Up County Paramedics

By Christina Smith

Contra Costa voters wading through the 29 state and 24 local measures on the ballot this November will find at least one that has no opposition argument: the "trauma tax" designed to increase emergency services by increasing funding for personnel, training and equipment.

The El Cerrito City Council voted unanimously to support passage of the measure at its meeting on Monday. Although the parcel tax assessment can go as high as $10 per person, only $5.50 would be charged the first year, said County Health Director Mark Finucane. Under the current plan, $2.4 million would be raised to improve service throughout the county, "which works out to about three cents per day per household for better emergency care," said Finucane.

The tax is necessary, Supervisor Tom Powers said, "because at this point, one out of seven calls

Police Report

Drug raid nets machine gun

By Will Tizard

The following is a summarized list of crime occurring in El Cerrito over the past week, according to police:

Honor Roll

● El Cerrito Detective John Carrillo, Sgt. Dennis Danielson and Officer J. Molica risked life and limb when they raided a residence on the 6700 block of Snowdon Avenue Oct. 4 at 5:30 p.m. based on evidence of drugs being present. The search resulted in the capture of an undisclosed amount of marijuana, a sawed-off shotgun and a machine gun.

The net also resulted in charges of cultivation of marijuana and posession charges for the two guns. No information about the suspects was listed.

Thefts

● A car stereo was stolen "neatly" by someone who used a hanger to get inside a car Oct. 22 on the 3400 block of Santa Clara Ave. The thief also discovered — with some alarm, no doubt — that a parabellum semi-automatic pistol was under the driver's seat. Both the stereo and the gun were gone when the owner reached his car, bringing the loss to $1,000.

The loss the thief might have suffered had the owner returned earlier could have been substantially greater.

● A determined thief, after finding nothing of greater value, made off with a gear shift knob from a car parked on the 500 block of Bonnie Lane. The $10 loot was the only fruit of an effort that included prying door locks and "ransacking" the car's glove box.

● Four hundred dollars worth of cardboard bails were taken from behind Safeway at 10636 San Pablo Ave. Oct. 22 for reasons only a thief could know.

Time Warp

● A camera and flash stolen between June 1 and Oct. 1 were reported to police Oct. 20. The trail of the $503 loss from the 2600 block of La Honda should be quite overgrown by now.

Disturbances

● After breaking a car's windshield with a tire jack, a driver attempted to run another driver over with a car Oct. 20 in the parking lot outside 10700 San Pablo Ave. The attack started with a scene described as, "suspect and victim argue over suspect's driving habits."

The suspect was not identified by the victim but was described to police.

Disturbances

● Windows valued at $500 were shot out at a house on the 6700 block of Snowdon Avenue Oct. by a BB gun-toting vandal who seems to have made a clean getaway.

● A suspect was found drunk in a car Oct. 21 on the 10800 block of San Pablo Avenue. After refusing the offer of a ride home, police instead provided a ride to jail.

Auto Thefts

● A 1983 Chevy S-10 Blazer valued at $9,000 was stolen from Ashbury Street near Lincoln Avenue Oct. 21. The license number is 1H2V067.

● A $15,000 Toyota Camry, license 2J67030, was stolen from Lincoln Avenue at Albemarle Street Oct. 19.

● A Toyota Celica, license 2KR5253 was stolen from the 11100 block of San Pablo Avenue Oct. 23.

Gun brandished in teen argument

By Bobby Calvan

The following is a summarized list of crime in Albany, as reported by police.

El Cerritan threatens Albany students

● A 19-year old El Cerrito man was arrested by police last week after he and a number of juvenile companions allegedly threatened a high school student with a loaded pistol at Albany High.

Although the man brandishing the weapon and his group were of the same race, police are disclaiming that the Oct. 17 incident was gang-related. "We have no real information that points to an organized gang being involved," said Sgt. Ronald Patton.

The man apparently threatened the student as revenge for an earlier incident in which the victim, with a group of other Albany High students, ridiculed the man's friends in a driving incident that occured at least one month ago, according to Patton.

Since that initial incident, the two groups have had additional confrontations, according to police reports. According to the police, one of the group members had been coming to the school to visit a girlfriend.

The man told police he only meant to scare the student with the loaded and cocked .25 caliber pistol, which was reportedly stolen from an El Cerrito home.

Armed Robberies

● Nat Pob Restaurant on Solano Avenue was robbed of $1,500. The suspect is described as a black male, 5 ft. 8 inches tall and roughly 25-years old.

● A Davis man told police he was robbed of $31 at knife-point at the Villa Motel.

"Grand" theft?

● An elderly woman was victimized by her own grandson, when the juvenile entered the woman's locked bedroom and allegedly walked out with $265 in cash, 13 silver dollar coins and a ring that was later recovered. The teenager had recently moved in with his grandmother. The boy will be returned to his parents.

Eat and run

● An Alex Cafe customer was arrested after he was unable to pay the bill. The man claimed he had lost the $5 he intended to use to pay for the food.

Thefts, Break-ins, etc...

● An attempted car trunk break-in was reported on the 1200-block of Portland Avenue.

Hey, Mister,
can you spare a spare?

● A spare tire was reported stolen from a pick-up truck parked on the 100-block of Key Route Boulevard.

An omelet on the house

● A house on the 800-block of Cerrito Street was reportedly beaned with eggs. The foul act occured on two separate occassions.

Juvenile break-in discovered

The following is a list of crimes that occurred in Kensington during the past week, according to police.

Suspicious Vehicles

• A man on Cowper Avenue reported two suspicious males running up the street looking into cars on Oct. 14. Found to be one intoxicated jogger and an intoxicated driver following.

• A woman on Berkeley Park Boulevard reported a suspicious vehicle parked in front of her residence on Oct. 14. Vehicle out of gas, owner a Kensington resident.

• A man on Santa Fe Avenue reported a vehicle almost ran him off the road in the area of Coventry Road on Oct. 14.

Arrests, Citations

An officer reported arresting a Kensington resident for driving with a suspended license on Oct. 16.

Straightening out the tunnel

Editor:

I thought I'd try to beat Harre Demoro in commenting on your article about the work being done on the Solano tunnel.

The tunnel was constructed during the 1911 electrification of the Southern Pacific suburban train system. The Southern Pacific operation, properly known as the Interurban Electric during the last three years of operation, used the tunnel until March 1941.

The Key System Trans-bay trains then used the tunnel until the cessation of their operations in April 1958. The tunnel — Northbrae, not Solano — was never used by street cars.

Correction

An article on toxic waste management in the Oct. 20 issue of The Journal stated that 300,000 pounds of hazardous waste is produced in Contra Costa County every year. Later in the article, the correct amount, 300,000 tons, is stated.

The Journal regrets the error.

ocal developer finds communication is the most effective mortar

By Christina Smith

...the parent of a child at Madera ...mentary School several years ... Michael Spexarth couldn't ...ly but be aware how much the ...chmond Unified School Dis... was in need of money. Des... ...erately needed maintenance was ...ing undone and the district was ...arching for ways to raise funds ...thout cutting further into the ...eady spartan class programs.

Spexarth also observed that the ...USD owned a section of land ...djacent to the playground that ...sn't been used for anything in ...decades. In 1984 he proposed that ...e school district sell the land to ...ate money for the district, and ...hat became the first step on what ...rned out to be a long road.

Spexarth, a Bay Area developer ...d El Cerrito resident, wound up ...proposing that five lots be de... ...veloped; three were sold and two ...ill be retained by the RUSD and ...eveloped by Spexarth. Three ...eeks ago Spexarth received a ...rtificate of completion, and ...onstruction is scheduled to begin soon on "one of the most beautiful houses in El Cerrito to date," he said. The architect of the house, Robert Baldino, "has a real wonderful sense of interior spaces. He can fit the site, not just impose his sense of design onto it. He has a feel for the land."

The rezoning necessary for the project (from institutional to low-density residential) was instantly opposed by many neighbors living on Arlington Boulevard and and Madera Drive for a variety of reasons: Loss of open space, loss of views, possible soil instability, congestion and increased traffic danger to the school children.

"Basically we proved their points to be wrong at the council meetings," Spexarth said. "Most of the concerns didn't address the issue of raising money for the school. The main objection was the they wanted open space but they didn't want to pay for it. The issue was that the RUSD couldn't pay for open space for the neighbors any more."

The RUSD favored the sale of the land. In 1986, Fred Basalto, Assistant Superintendent and business director for the Richmond Unified School District, wrote to El Cerrito Planning Director DeWayne Guyer, saying, "The district has a dire need for funds to accomplish very urgent deferred maintenance projects totaling over $11.3 million. The selling of surplus land will generate the funds to accomplish this objective." The RUSD also testified that the school population would not be adversely affected by additional homes in the area.

The City Council agreed that if the city was not going to purchase the land, the development should go forward. City staff decided the area would have to be a "planned development," subject to a stringent set of requirements.

Subsequent presentations to the Design Review Board headed off much of the original neighborhood concern. An environmental impact report indicated that soil conditions and water supply would be sufficient for a low-density development. Spexarth agreed that houses would be no more than 35 feet high, and only trees with a mature height of 30 feet would be planted. Each house would be individually designed, and lot sizes would range from 10,000 to almost 20,000 square feet. Drought resistant, native California plants would be used for landscaping.

The design review board was cautious but supportive. When a public hearing on rezoning was held in April, 1987, only two letters of protest were received, and Planning Director Guyer said he felt the proposal was consistant with the city's general plan.

At a planning commission meeting in September of that year, a neighbor spoke in favor of the development and said the majority of neighbors agreed that the project deserved to be approved. "He showed substantial concern for the environment and possible impact on neighbors, the largest amount of concern any developer ever displayed that I've seen," said Eugene Lukes, a neighbor of the project and former member of the El Cerrito Planning Commission. "There are all indications that it will be an attractive development and a credit to the city."

One of the most innovative accommodations made to the concerns the neighbors voiced was the creation of a view corridor, "so that as the houses built up the kids playing on the playground would still be able to see the Bay," Spexarth said. Likewise, residents of the El Cerrito flatlands would continue to be able to see the hills.

The other accommodation involved the preservation of an easement running between Hillside Park and Madera School. "People could walk from one point to the other through the woods, and we didn't see any reason to stop them from doing that in the future," he said.

In these specific ways and in the overall planning of the project, "We tried to develop with some sense of what the community needs were," he said.

The type of opposition he encountered from neighbors is one reason housing is becoming more out of reach during a period of great population expansion, Spexarth said. "If people are against a quality land use approach, then the cost of housing is going to be beyond everyone's ability to afford it. People say they want open space, but somebody has to pay for it. Land use issues like this have to be resolved."

It was particularly frustrating in this case because the main objective of the project was to raise money for the school. "After the bond issue failed (that would have established a parcel tax to benefit the district in July) it should have been clear that the RUSD needed money and this was one way to do that," Spexarth said. "Ultimately what prevailed was the highest and best use of the land."

Absentee ballots now available for seniors

Seniors should request absentee ballots by Nov. 1 to avoid standing in long lines.

The Contra Costa County Advisory Council on Aging is concerned that the unusually full ballot this Nov. 8 may present a hardship to many seniors because of long waits at the polls.

Seniors are encouraged to request absentee ballots if the anticipated lines are a concern to them. Written requests should be sent to the Registrar's office, P.O. Box 271, Martinez 94553 on or before Nov. 1, the earlier the better.

Miller:Styling scores bi

By Daniel S. Levine

When somebody says "nice cut" to Ed Miller these days they are probably complimenting him on one of the $8 specials he gives at Albany's Supercuts, but there was a time when it would have had a very different meaning to him.

A fan of the Oakland A's, he empathizes with their World Series loss. The 31-year-old hair stylist was part of the San Diego Padre team that lost to the Detroit Tigers in the 1984 World Series.

"I still think of myself as a baseball player because that is what I have been my whole life," said Miller. "Now I'm an ex-major leaguer."

Built like a running back, the 5-foot-9, 190 pound speedster was known for his base-stealing and defensive skills. Between 1975 and 1980, even though he spent blocks of time in the majors, Miller led the minor leagues in stolen bases for six consecutive years.

Recurrent hamsting pulls and tears prevented him from extensive everyday play, but Miller was considered a "can't miss" talent when the Atlanta Braves picked him up in 1978 and Hank Aaron compared him defensively to Willie Mays.

"I never was a big home run hitter," said Miller. "I was never a big RBI guy. My legs were the reason I was there. My legs got me there and were going to keep me there."

Miller said it is tough for teams to keep players who make salaries of more than $100,000 and spend two months on the disabled list.

One of Miller's most memorable moments came in Atlanta in 1984 playing as a Padre against his old teammates on the Braves. "It was the last game of the season and it was raining and they were just trying to get the game over with. Pasquel Perez was pitching and I hit a line drive into the blue seats, a tremendous home run. It shocked not only me, but everyone."

It was Miller's first and only Major league home run and turned out to be his last big league at bat. Miller relished the moment.

"They say 'home run trot?' Well I figured I may never hit one again, so I had a serious home run trot," he said, smiling broadly as he imitated his slow motion trot. "It took me almost two days to get around the bases. When I got to second the umpire said 'Damn it Miller let's go!' "

Miller broke into the majors at the end of 1977 when the second place Texas Rangers called him up to for the last month of play. With teamates like Gaylord Perry, Miller was suddenly playing with childhood heroes. His duties there included late inning defensive replacement, baserunning, and even "giving Gaylord the Vaseline with the towel."

After success with the Padres in 1984, he was told he would have a shot as the starting centerfielder the following season. An auto accident five days before spring training prevented Miller from working out fully that spring and he was sent down to be a player-coach for the Padres' minor league club.

As he became healthy he progressed to triple A ball. But just when it looked like he would be back in the majors, he tore abdominal muscles making his way around the bases in a game, and was sidelined for four months.

In 1985 and 1986 he rebuilt his strength and skills in the Mexican league, but a collision in the outfield tore his shoulder muscles and took the injury-prone Miller out of the game once again.

Still nursing his shoulder, Miller was unable to play in Mexico this year and continues to make use of his cosmetology license he earned while injured in 1983. "This is the first time I've been able to apply my cosmetology training. I hope the sky's the limit as far as hair's concerned."

Miller started cutting hair in the clubhouse and said he has "always been intrigued with hair.

"Being on the platform, doing my thing with hair is almost like being up their at home plate, doing my thing against that pitcher," he said. But Miller's cutting station bears no indication that he has even a remote interst in baseball. He is hushed about his career when he is with clients.

"I try not to let that be the focus of a haircut," he said. "When you cut hair, you have to concentrate, and when I talk about baseball I get really juiced up."

That is not to say that the big leaguer does not like to about his past with his cl

"My biggest thrill is when I little kid's hair and they have baseball card and ask me autograph it. They tell friends who go to local shops buy my card and then come here to ask for me to sign makes me feel good to know haven't been forgotten."

Former major league baseball player Ed Miller gives Kevin Bender a pre-wedding haircut. Miller doesn't discuss baseball with his clients, he says, because it distracts from the trimming.

Unusual lamps add glow to the home

By Barbara Davidson

"The shop has changed over the years," said Lynn Duncan of Sue Johnson Custom Lamps & Shades at 1745 Solano Ave.

"We used to carry a lot of Victorian and antique things but now we have a more contemporary look," she said. "Because we are in Berkeley we get a really well educated group of people who want odd things, ethnic things and staid things."

Customers include New York antique dealers who want customized shades for old lamps, housewives from Danville, professors from Berkeley, and the affluent from San Francisco. "Sometimes visitors from Hawaii and Alaska will stop here and buy a lamp because they can't get something like this back home," said Duncan. "Because we have a broad spectrum of clients, there is something for everyone. That is what allows us to be as creative as we want."

Most of the lamp bases are wired from objects such as hand carved painted animals from Oaxaca (Mexico), ginger jars, perfume lamps, masks and baskets.

Local importers on buying trips to the Philippines, Mexico, South America, Africa, Thailand and Indonesia, are on the lookout for items which might be suitable for Sue Johnson lamps. Antique fairs in Oregon and Massachusetts are good sources for lamps.

Most of the shades are made of flakes of mica, a mineral, combined with shellac and compressed into sheet form. Mica was popular in California and in Berkeley in particular from 1895-1920, the 'Arts and Crafts' period.

"Mica is wonderful stuff," said Duncan. "Shades have come in from the 1920s where the drum had worn out but the mica was still intact."

Parchment paper and fabric are also used to make shades.

Paper can be treated in several ways. One technique is crackle-lacquer, the result of using up to four coats of lacquer to achieve a textured looking design. Another is marbleized paper, which involves placing blobs of color atop a gelatinous susbstance, then combing the blobs through the substance and allowing the paper to pick up the color. The effect is a beautiful swirl design.

Fabric shades are made from old embroidered Chinese shawls, which were made for wealthy women in India, from the borders of Indian saris. The frame of the shade is wrapped and lined with satin before the outer fabric is put on.

All the beading on fabric shades is hand strung in North Carolina by Johnson's 86-year-old mother, Maddy Johnson.

Customers can also bring in their own bases and purchase a shade off the floor or have one designed for them. Or they can redo old lamps by having new material put on an old frame or having an old floor lamp replated.

The lamps cost from $29.50 to $400 depending on size and type of materials used. For example, a plain drum style made with simple parchment paper may cost $40 but the same lamp done in mica could cost $140.

Everything is made at the shop except the frames, which are designed there but made elsewhere.

There are 11 employees, three of whom run the shop and are versed on all aspects of designing and making lamps. Six employees have been there for nine or more of the 15 years since the shop opened. Duncan attributes this to the convivial atmosphere created by Sue Johnson.

"Sue is the guiding light," said Duncan. "She tends to let people do what they want. There is a lot of room for growth and new techniques."

Johnson ran a crafts cooperative in Liberia while serving in the Peace Corps for five years and she not only loves getting things from Africa but has good connections for doing so.

She came to California after the Peace Corps, hoping to use her degree in interior desi teach. Unable to get a job i field, she went to work as friday for a Lafayette lamp maker.

Johnson began her business by displaying lamps in the storefront win Gershon Photo, now her door neighbor.

The store plans to have nual sale in late Novem clear out last year's merch followed by a champagne ing of new merchandise t whose names are on a mail of 7,000 previous custome

Money Matters

Pertinent financial information for the layperson from local accountant Jaime T. Fukumae

Try tax-free exchange for a change

If you are anticipating selling a piece of business or investment property and replacing it with other property, consider the benefits of a tax-free exchange.

The tax-free exchange allows you to dispose of one piece of property and acquire another without incurring any current tax liability. With a qualified exchange the gain is deferred until the property is later disposed of. If the newly-acquired property is still owned at the time of your death, the deferred gain may never result in any income tax. (Property passing through an estate is treated on a "stepped-up basis.")

The amount of your tax savings on a tax-free exchange will be determined in part by the amount of profit you would realize if the property were sold, and by any possible offsetting losses available through other transactions.

To qualify as a tax-free exchange, certain requirements must be met by a transaction. The property exchanged must be of "like-kind." For example, real estate cannot be exchanged for personal property.

In most cases real estate can be traded for other real estate even though their uses may be different. Raw land, for example, can be exchanged tax-free for an office building, or a farm can be exchanged for urban rental property.

The property that is exchanged and the property received must be held for productive use in a trade or business or for investment. Property to be received must be identified within 45 days after you transfer your property and you must receive the new property no later than 180 days after you have transferred your property.

Local councilwomen aim higher

Two former East Bay city councilwomen have broadened their horizons and have set themselves greater goals for public service. Both believe their experience in city government and some additional regional and state activities related to it can be used to help agencies now experiencing some difficulties.

Ruth Ganong, former city councilwoman for the City of Albany, is running for the Board of Directors of the AC Transit District. That ailing facility is suffering from an erosion of trust and morale, both in the public eye and among its employees.

Ganong believes an infusion of new blood, proven effective by many years of public activity, can be one of the factors that can turn it around and bring new pride and success to the district. Bright, honest, hard working, and with dogged determination, Ganong dedicates herself to the job at hand. Her years on the city council, in state and regional agencies, and before that, on the Albany School Board, have been ample proof of that.

Sue Hone was a member of the City Council of Berkeley, with additional service in state and regional agencies. She, too, has a record of hard, dedicated work with the Council which has, she feels, prepared her for further public service. Hone is running for the Board of Directors of the Bay Area Rapid Transit District (BART).

Whatever the outcome of the bids for election for these two women, it is exciting to follow their careers and to realize the gold mine of public servants—male and female — available to us in the Bay Area. Many of the persons now on city councils, on boards and commissions throughout the area have worn many hats through the years. One cannot but admire the dedication, compassion, and, yes, energy that makes them continue their work for the public weal.

And the energy needed for such a race is incredible. With national and state races, with ballot propositions as well as other regional and local races, the only way to run for such boards is to be seen. And being seen means to attend every meeting and gathering possible. And there are so many of those. One look at the ladies' schedules could make a less energetic person take to her bed. But they do it. With grit, determination and some help from loyal supporters. Ruth Ganong even took time from her heavy schedule earlier in the campaign, to accompany her husband to Japan. Then it was back for a broad jump into the fray.

The only hope is that, with a ballot the size of ours this year, people will still be voting when they get to the regional races. Important as they are, people do tire easily. One can only hope that they will persevere.

Continuing in a political vein, a recent conversation with members of our community focused on the number of political commercials now appearing on the TV tube, and people's reactions to same. Piqued by what people were saying, your correspondent took an informal poll about how people felt about the commercials and how they responded to them.

"I recently purchased a new television set with a remote control, my first remote control," said one Albany woman. "And that's how I handle television political commercials. I play with my remote control. I use the muter or the volume or the power controls, and off they go. It's fun and I don't have to listen to them."

A Kensington resident handles them another way. No couch potato she, she rises, goes to another room and does deep knee bends and sit ups while they are shown. "I'm getting a lot of exercise these days," she says.

But my favorite is the somewhat dour view of another El Cerrito resident. Each time she sees a political commercial, she says, "I try to estimate the cost of the moment's view. Then I figure out how much actual information we have received during that moment. With these two figures in mind, I then work out the money spent to give us that information. Since most of them actually give us no information about the candidate, the cost is astronomical."

Ah, yes, the elections. Most of my interviewees also mentioned the insurance initiatives. And their reaction was a moan. "I'm voting against the one with the most commercials," said one. And another said, "The only thing I can do is go with the person I trust most."

Tips for safe Halloween

The following are safety rules which State Fire Marshal James F. McMullen urges everyone to observe during Halloween celebrations.

- Costumes should be light-colored, preferably fluorescent or with reflective tape attached. (Tape is available at hardware, bicycle and sporting goods stores.)
- When selecting costumes, masks, wigs or beards, insist they be made of flame retardant material. (Check the label!)
- When making costumes, avoid the use of flimsy materials such as light-weight cotton fabrics. (Cotton sheets and pillow cases are easily ignited.)
- Whether purchased or home-made, avoid outfits with loose, baggy sleeves or billowing skirts. Keep hemlines short enough to prevent tripping.
- Decorations are also a potential hazard. Be extremely careful with tinder-dry cornstalks and other harvest-season items. Keep them away from sources of heat and don't let them block doorways or stairs.
- Use battery-powered lights — never candles — to light jack-o'-lanterns.
- Instruct children to stay well away from open flame, especially bonfires and burning leaves outdoors and fireplaces

Assessing health insurance

The Wisenors are delighted to announce the arrival of our first great-grandchild, Rodney Matthew, son of our granddaughter Janine and her husband, Keith Griffin of Tacoma, Wash. Rodney weighed in at 8 pounds and 6 ounces and all are doing well.

The nominating committee, consisting of Dolph Stankus, chair, Blair Burton, Charlie Weaver, and myself, have met and will announce a slate of board of directors for election in November. Ballots will be mailed following the November meeting.

Dina Erickson, California Casual Furniture, is recovering from foot surgery and hopes to be in full swing very soon. Get well soon, Dina.

There is growing concern about the 5.5 million Californians without health insurance and the devastating impact uncompensated care is having on the state's hospital system, focusing more attention on the availability and affordability of health insurance.

Because 4 million of the Californians without insurance are employed, usually by small businesses, or are dependents of these employees, mandating that employers provide health insurance is the most frequently offered answer to concern about the uninsured.

Mandate legislation is pending at the federal level (S.1265-Kennedy) and the state legislature had similar proposals before it during the last session. Only Hawaii and Massachusetts have adopted the mandate approach to date. As the observers say, it is only a matter of time before mandates are enacted in all states unless alternative solutions are identified.

Employers' concerns about health insurance are two-fold: The rising costs of medical care and covered services will increase. A trade publication for the insurance industry recently reported that "1988 health costs exceeded estimates and there is no relief in sight for 1989." Premium costs for employers who provide health insurance have been increasing from 20 percent to 30 percent and more each year, despite the sophisticated cost containment techniques many large employers have implemented to try to reduce costs.

Mandates establish a floor of services that must be provided. Past legislative proposals have contained very rich benefit levels. But even if a bare minimum plan is agreed upon, it is only a matter of time before special interests push to have their particular specialties covered.

The California Medical Association recently announced it will spend approximately $50,000 to put together a coalition of insurers, chambers of commerce, labor, hospitals, etc., to develop a private sector approach to the uncompensated care problem. The California Chamber has participated in preliminary discussions with the medical association, and the Chamber's Health Care Policy Committee has agreed to explore alternatives with the association.

Chamber members are responding to a recent survey ranking health insurance costs ahead of workers' compensation as the major problem facing businesses in 1989. The Chamber believes that shifting the burden of paying for uncompensated care onto the employers would do nothing to resolve the cost problem, but would ensure that California companies have a more difficult time competing in the international marketplace.

Health insurance costs and availability will no doubt be one of the most critical business issues in the next legislative session.

As the season turns to fall and the expectation of the holidays is before us, the fashion answer of the season is JENNIFER HUGHES, FASHION ACCESSORIES.

Jennifer has brought to the Montclair Village one of the finest collections of eel-skin bags, shoes, briefcases and gift items. These not only come in the standard black, grey and brown but also in the collection are some rich deep-toned royal blues, burgundies, pinks and cognacs.

"We are very happy in our new home in the Village. The community and the atmosphere make it very enjoyable and easy to make friends and customers." commented Jennifer, as she put the finishing touches on a display featuring dress high heels drawn from a palette red and black.

Jennifer, who has an extensive background in the design and importation of eel skin products to this country from Korea, has created not only an economical alternative to leather goods but also an aesthetic that is obvious the first time you pick up a clutch bag or slip on your first pair of eel skin high heels.

In my last conversation with Jennifer she was very enthused about the Village and the response she has received about the product and the other fashion accessories she carries in her store.

There are new lines of fashion jewelry by notable designers such as Kate Seidman who works in porcelain and Susan Klein who does beautiful work in yarn, wire and crystals. The 1928 Jewelry Company has a collection of pieces that come right of the 1890's and at the other end of the spectrum are the City Lights designs that are 1999 modern.

Jennifer Hughes has two locations for your shopping adventures: in Danville at the Clocktower, phone 820-1020, and in the Montclair Village at 6120 LaSalle Ave., phone 339-2950. Please call for store hours and any additional information you may need.

Welcome to Montclair a new and innovative mortgage company. MONTCLAIR MORTGAGE, owned and operated by Scott Senzig, is ready to assist you in packaging the loan you need, want and deserve.

Montclair Mortgage has the ability to plug you into 40 of the Bay Areas best money lenders, depending on your personal critera and and financial vision. "We want to assist our clients through the maze of products and to help direct them to the organizations that will best fulfill their specific needs," commented Scott.

"We pride ourselves in our counsel with our clients and in doing this we are able to consistently match our clients with proper lending institutions."

Some of the lending options offered by Montclair Mortgage are World Savings, Great Western Bank, Glendale Federal Savings, INCO Realty Services and Mortgage Loans of America, whose innovative programs of bi-weekly mortgage investment allows you to build equity four times faster than a conventional loan.

Scott, a graduate of Loyola University, has 12 years financial and banking experience. He has owned his own realty company and has been a senior loan officer. This background gives him a unique perspective in real estate lending and financing transactions.

Scott is assisted at Montclair Mortgage by underwriter Jim Foote. Jim is the man who makes sure everything — and I do mean everything — is correct in your submittal package to your lender. This is of utmost importance, especially when time is of the essence and accuracy is a given.

Montclair Mortgage offers its services to the realty community in the East Bay, certified financial planners, lawyers, CPA's and satisfied customers.

Montclair Mortgage is located in the Montclair Village at 1980 Mountain Blvd., Suite 211. To contact either Scott Senzig or Jim Foote, call 339-8511.

Fame-style arts program off to a leaping start at EC High

By Jonathan D. Rabinovitz

EL CERRITO -- Principal Maria Robledo's office at El Cerrito High School is a hub of activity.

As the administrator responsible for implementing the school's new curriculum for the performing and visual arts, Robledo is starting the school on a major transition, and her days are busy.

For example, on Thursday, Oct. 13, at about 8 a.m., she met with a history teacher to congratulate the instructor on a New York Times article: The story discusses the teacher's "unorthodox" approach to teaching American history — a part of the high school's new curriculum.

A few minutes later Jacqueline Burgess, a dance instructor, talked with the principal about improving dance facilities. Then Cathie Kossel, who teaches photography and desk-top publishing, stopped by the office to discuss the renovation of the darkroom and the eight new Macintosh computers the school just received.

By 8:30, eight teachers had dropped in to update Robledo on their latest projects.

"This is a typical morning," Robledo said.

El Cerrito High School, enrollment about 1,600 students, is one of the first schools in the Richmond Unified School District to adopt a "specialty program." The impact of the new program for the performing and visual arts is being watched closely by district administrators, said Robledo.

The success or failure of the El Cerrito program may set the tone for the school district's future plans.

Superintendent Walter Marks announced last year that all district schools will have "magnet" programs by 1992. Specialties will range from a high tech math and science program at Kennedy High School to El Cerrito's new curriculum, as well as a host of different programs at other schools.

Students can choose to transfer to a school outside their neighborhood, if they are attracted to the school's specialty program. This year about 50 students were granted permission to attend El Cerrito High.

The new El Cerrito program is modeled on the New York School of the Performing Arts, which was featured in the movie and TV series Fame. But Robledo said El Cerrito is taking a more low-key approach. No auditions are required to take part in the new program.

"The basic core classes haven't changed," she said. "We're maintaining a comprehensive high school."

However, the school gives students more opportunities to study the arts, she said.

An additional period was added to the school day, making it easier for students with heavy academic schedules to take art, music, drama, or dance. More arts classes are being offered, and the school has at least six more teachers than last year, including an orchestra leader and another dance instructor.

A $199,700 state grant for the program has helped pay for the expanded teaching staff, the development of the new curriculum, and improvement of school facilities.

"There's been some chaos. Some supplies haven't arrived," said Robledo. "But there's magic in the classrooms."

After about one month of school, teachers say it is too soon to judge the program. But several teachers agree there are some noticeable positive differences from last year.

Dance department head Burgess called the program "a shot in the arm."

The school has almost doubled the number of dance classes being offered, increasing the total from five to nine. Classes are smaller, Burgess said.

Burgess, who has taught at the school for 13 years, said she is teaching more specialized classes--jazz, modern, African-Haitian, and ballet.

"There's no program like it in the school district," she said.

Paul Yonemura, who refers to himself as the "samurai band director," leads four music groups at the high school. He is one of three instructors in the school's music department.

This year his program has new sheet music, and has added a timpani, a xylophone, and a snare drum. "These are things that a director dreams about and never sees," he said. "The kids eyes lit up when they saw the new equipment."

"This year I feel more relaxed. I don't feel like I'm on the chopping block. They're not taking classes away. They're adding them," he said.

New courses include music appreciation, watercolor painting, poetry, black authors, American movies and literature, among others.

The emphasis on the arts is not intended to channel students into pursuing careers as actors and painters, Robledo said.

"The idea of highlighting the humanities and the visual and graphic arts is to catch the student's interest and spread it to other areas," she said.

For some students, the expanded arts program may help keep them in school.

"I'm not here to make stars," said drama teacher Kathleen Ray. "Theater gives some students a reason for being at school. It makes their lives a little richer."

Journal—Mark Koehler

El Cerrito High School's new "magnet" arts program has added new specialized dance classes to the curriculum. Students can now take jazz, modern, and African-Haitian dance courses.

Students will try harder in other classes, she said, so they can stay in school and participate in theater.

El Cerrito's new program may also help students already highly motivated about academics.

According to Robledo, colleges want students who show a variety

ougars clobbered, 63-0, must struggle to get out of slump

Journal—Mark Koehler

Above, Cougar quarterback Mike Kostainsek is gracious in defeat, as he offers congratulations to the St. Mary's team. Right, the Panthers turned the Cougars offense upside-down in their resounding victory.

By Tim Laird

The Albany Cougars varsity football team has this positive note to go on as they prepare for tomorrow's homecoming game against Piedmont: Things cannot possibly get worse!

The Cougars were clobbered (an understatement) last Saturday afternoon in Berkeley as the St. Mary's Panthers put the Cougars away early, eventually winning by a ridiculous 63-0 score.

Albany has now been shut out in its last three games. Or, if you want to put it another way, the last time the team scored was on Sept. 30 when they managed 16 points in a 10-point victory over hapless Richmond. The Cougars are still looking for their first points in October.

The Panthers probably would have reached the century mark had it not been for the fact that their second string team played the bulk of the second half.

Journal—Mark Koehler

The amazing thing about the blowout was that St. Mary's did all of its offensive work via the ground.

You would think that 63 points would mean about 400 yards in the air. Instead it was the running game that killed the Cougars. Senior Keith Williams rushed for 150 yards and piled up 120 yards in returns while scoring three touchdowns.

Williams scored on runs of 45 and 11 yards, and managed to run back a second-half kickoff 75 yards for a touchdown.

The Panthers also got a big day from their other running backs. Joe McCallum scored three touchdowns, twice on one-yard runs and scampering 70 yards for another score. Overall, McCallum totaled 97 yards on 14 carries.

It wasn't just a two-man show. Anthony Perlson got into the fun by scoring on a 10-yard run, Willie Jackson added a 2-yard score and Sean Breaux sliced through the Cougar defense, if you could call it a defense, on a 24-yard run for a score.

You ask about their quarterback? Amazingly enough, he threw just one pass and it was incomplete. St. Mary's did not even punt, but when you grind out 363 yards on the ground you probably don't have to.

The Panthers led at the half 35-0 and just for good measure they added 28 points in the second-half as they routed the Cougars 63-0.

Over the last three games Albany has been outscored a total of 129-0. The Cougars are 3-4 overall, 1-3 in league.

Up next for Albany are the Piedmont Scotts. The game is the Cougars' homecoming and will be played tomorrow at Cougar Field at 3:30 p.m. The spirit of Albany High might be what is needed to pull the team out of the slump. Two years in bleak seasons the Cougars were able to beat the Scotts. Maybe history will repeat itself.

of interests. In last year's system, college-bound students often didn't have times for the arts, she said. The new program makes it easier for them to branch out.

Even the required history and English classes encourage a more interdisciplinary approach. Teacher Bruce Greene said that in the past El Cerrito High School offered classes that combined humanities and social sciences. The new program formally "codifies" that curriculum. "It makes it easier to experiment," he said.

Core courses, such as civilization and culture, and law and society, provide a more multidimensional approach than the standard history class.

Some teachers, though, remain cautious in their optimism about the program.

According to one instructor, the school district is hard-pressed for finances, and much of the grant money has already been spent. The school still does not have an auditorium and must adapt practice rooms for shows.

"I want to be an actor and a writer," said Antwan Flourney, a junior, who ignored two friends who were shouting and teasing while he spoke.

"This year's schedule is a lot better. It gives me time to be enrolled in the theater program," he said.

Freshman Ivan Gomez sat alone on the side of the building, near a bus stop. The new offerings had not affected his courseload, he said. But he added, "Maybe they will next year."

"I came here instead of Kennedy, because I want to be an artist. I like art better," he said.

According to the principal, 150 kids are taking a theater class this year and maybe 100 of them will continue. Gradually the school will develop a base of expertise, she said.

agency, assuming there are no further delays.

Existing businesses that want to remain where they are must express that interest within the first 45 days in order to be given an additional 60 days to strike a deal with the succesful developer, he said. If they cannot work out a deal to share the block by then, they will have to be relocated and compensated for the market value of their property.

The agency expects to offer a discount of up to $1 million to the developer it chooses in order to make the apartments cost-effective to build. In return, the agency will require 20 percent of the apartment units to be set aside for moderate-income residents.

The city defines moderate income as $33,700 a year, or $701 a month for one person's rent.

In order to provide the discount to the developer, the agency will have to borrow between $200,000 and $600,000 from the developer itself. The admittedly unusual funding move would require the loan to be paid back with interest once property tax revenue from the apartments begins to roll into the agency, said O'Keeffe.

An additional $600,000 from the El Cerrito's moderate income housing fund will probably also go to the developer, said O'Keeffe.

Ramila Patel, part-owner of the Bay Bridge Motel, said the agency's move came as a shock to her. "It's not our wish to sell or to leave," said Patel. "It's very painful."

Patel, who is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, said she was only told of the vote on Saturday and is still deciding on what to do.

Chamber of Commerce Director Del Wisenor said a chamber committee that serves as a watchdog on redevelopment has not yet formulated a reaction, although businesses in the past have been unhappy about forced relocation.

The owners of the Silver Dollar restaurant, which is likely to be replaced by the apartments, were out of town during the agency's vote.

St. Onge. The 15-year-old told police he was invited or lured to Kabeary's former Kensington home where the suspect allegedly masturbated while viewing a pornographic movie, according to court documents.

Pornographic negatives were also reportedly found by new tenants at Kabeary's former Kensington home depicting a nude boy masterbating.

Police, armed with a search warrant, seized pornographic material, camera equipment, and address books and rosters from his current home in Martinez Sept. 21.

marketing representative for Prime Computers, a company that will be submitting a proposal.

According to the district's director of computer services Orvan Kollewe, school district computer systems generally grow "part by part." The RUSD's plan represents a "concerted effort to put it in one package," he said.

While other districts have applied computer use for one school or one grade, the RUSD is breaking new ground by trying to create a district-wide plan for kindergarten through 12th grade, Kollewe said.

District officials project that the RUSD may invest as much as $11 million in the seven-year program. Additional funds will come from the computer company spearheading the project.

Despite this investment, Prime Computer's Nelson called it a "win-win" situation for both partners in the deal.

The investment would pay off for the companies by providing a platform for new technology and an "advertisement" at the same time, Kollewe said.

Nelson added that the contract also would guarantee several million dollars in sales to the district.

Superintendent Marks initiated joint ventures between computer companies and school districts at his two previous jobs as superintendent of schools in Montclair, New Jersey, and Raleigh, North Carolina.

At last week's board meeting he said that parts of the new computer system would begin operating next fall. A contractor should be selected by around August.

All five boardmembers praised the progress that had been made.

"If we keep going with this plan, we'll be the best school district in California," said school boardmember Eddis Harrison.

council before beginning a search for candidates, Murray said. The firm would also assist in the interview process.

Mayor Siri said she participated in the search for a city manager in 1981 and, although she was pleased with the candidate who was ultimately chosen, "Of the others, one was very bad and the other four were not interesting. What do you do now that's different?" Murray responded that personal contact with the candidates has been increased and assured the council that he would be personally coordinating the search if his firm was selected.

Councilman Stephen Porter expressed concern that a search could take as long as three months; Murray said that the process could be condensed to have a new manager ready to start before budget deliberations begin in February. Councilmembers agreed the new city manager should be in place before an assistant manager is chosen.

In other business, the council adopted a resolution formalizing a policy opposing discrimination against people with AIDS or AIDS-related conditions. The council stopped short of adopting the policy as an ordinance which would have to be legally enforced.

to a paramedic will not be answered by a paramedic. In my estimation, that seventh person doesn't deserve to be handled in a less important manner."

The shortfall is a result of pre-hospital care becoming more sophisticated and expensive, coupled with local funding cutbacks because of Proposition 13, said Finucane.

The tax would be used to support three specific links in the emergency care system. Under the sample plan, $656,000 would be used to add six paramedic units throughout the county. It would also provide $360,000 for "first responder" training and equipment for firefighters, who are often the first to arrive at the scene of an emergency.

An additional $969,000 would provide increased training and support to trauma centers, and the remaining $504,000 would be used to monitor the emergency medical care system and determine other needs that may not have been met.

If the measure passes it would mandate the creation of a county-wide assessment district that each of the county's 18 cities would have the option to join. Powers noted that Alameda County passed a similar bill three years ago, with some cities assessing more than others within the $10 limit, depending on what the community felt its needs were.

Miracle of the Forest

When you walk into a National Forest, you really believe you're the first person who's ever been here. Funny thing is, you're not.

These forests have been used for over one hundred years. From this timber stand, settlers used wood to build their homes. And ties were cut for the railroad. Hard to believe, isn't it. But that's the Miracle of the Forest. With careful management these forests have renewed themselves, year after year providing us with all kinds of benefits. And that's why we call them, "Forever Forests."

Come see for yourself! And get involved with the new "Forests For Us" program and tell people all about the Miracle of the Forest.

Baby from prehistory a hit at Hall of Scienc

By Barbara Hulley

Suppose a baby stegasaurus has just walked into your living room.

As its horned tail knocks over your new lamp, you are groping for the phone, about to call for help. Suddenly, the creature coughs, hesitates, and says,

Theater

"Hello." What sorts of questions would you have for this apparently friendly apparition?

Got them ready? Then pack up the kids and drive over to Berkeley's Lawrence Hall of Science, where their "Dinosaurs!" exhibit is in full swing until March 1.

You will see life-like replicas of the prehistoric beasts that move and glare and growl as if you're their next meal. You will hear yourself saying melodic names like Corythosaurus and Apatosaurus. And, for a treat the kids will never forget, you will get to see a baby stegasaurus dance, sing and answer questions in the Science Discovery Theatre's production of "Dino Doesn't Live Here Anymore."

The original show, from the collaborative team of Lincoln Bergman, Barbara Ando, Gigi Dornfest, and Sue Jagoda, is a clever, entertaining way to get children involved in the ongoing exploration of how the dinosaurs lived and died. The snappy songs and jokes keep the information rolling, yet are a far cry from the kind of stuffy, academic learning many children dislike.

In between the discussion of how the dinosaurs disappeared, and whether they are more like reptiles or birds, lie references to the film E.T., and to the dinosaurs leaving without giving a forwarding address.

The plot is like an old episode of The Twilight Zone. Two scientists, Dr. Jones and Dr. Bones, are discussing their upcoming dinosaurs exhibit. Jones leaves, and Bones, feeling sleepy, decides to sleep in a dinosaur nest that is part of the exhibit.

Bones awakes to the sound of crackling and puffs of smoke (which frightens a little blonde girl in the front row), signifying the birth of—are you ready?— a baby stegasaurus! At the sight of the lumbering, green and purple creature, Bones is scared, yet quickly composes herself at the thought that this might lead to the "Nobel Prize!"

When it turns out that baby Dino can talk, this leads to an exploration of the life of the dinosaurs. The children in the audience become noticably excited when Bones asks the baby what noises it makes.

"What noises do you think a dinosaur would make?" Bones asks, turning to the cluster of rapt children, and they respond with an assortment of growls and snarls. The dinosaur adds to this with a growl which almost knocks Bones over, but then adds shyly, "We only sounded like that when we were angry."

Throughout the show, an attempt is made to link the dinosaurs condition with the humans, perhaps to make the children feel less threatened by the huge prehistoric beasts. The baby stegasaurus is cute and nonthreatening, donning a false nose and glasses to disguise himself from prying humans.

The wonderful songs begin by pointing out the differences between man and dinosaur, but conclude with the warm message, "We're the same, you and I." The scientist and the dinosaur are equally curious about each other, which might lead the children to a new perspective about history.

Some of the most effective aspects of the show are the question and answer segments between the children and Dino. Christopher Bauer, who plays Dr. Jones and Dino in one of the two rotating casts, says he feels priveleged to be a part of the learning experience for children. "The show is an opportunity to let children respond and discover for themselves. I think children need to be reeducated, because television and film don't give them a chance to respond individually. It is important to start at this level," he says.

Saying that he finds playing a dinosaur "an opportunity to intelligently transfer something to the kids," Bauer adds that the children's questions keep him on his toes. "A kid asked me if I had bad breath. I said, 'Hold on,' and I breathed on the doctor and she reeled backward. I looked back and said, 'Yes.'"

Lance Marsh, who plays Dino in alternating performances, agrees that the questions are the most stimulating and often challenging part of the show. "I know more about stegasauruses than anyone I know. But they still ask questions that I can't answer. A lot of those kids have tremendous imaginations, and I think the show stimulates that." Marsh causes an uproar of laughter when, as Dino, his calm answer to one question is, "Well, I'm told I have a brain as big as a walnut."

Careful attention and effort has been lavished on the show, from Scarlett Manning's painted backdrop to the dinosaur costume, which was designed by a creative team. Gary Lapow's original music is bouncy and imaginative, with campy lyrics such as "strumming on the old bonejo."

Perhaps the final summation of the show is best said by Juanita Blackburn, 8, who notes that the show was "good. Dino was really cute." Or perhaps it is in the intense expression on the face of a small child in a red and white dress who leans forward and asks Dino, "What do you feel? And what do you think about? And what are you going to have for dinner?"
